

EFF TOURISM | NEWSLETTER | N°4

Dear reader,

We send you the fourth newsletter of EFF Tourism with all the news of the project.

What is es EFF TOURISM?

Environmental Footprint of Fluvial Tourism aims to encourage sustainable initiatives and measures in the natural spaces where fluvial tourism activities take place. EFF Tourism will provide to all those involved in fluvial tourism (those offering and using fluvial tourism services; boat owners, etc) with the skills and competences to reduce their environmental footprint. More information on the project is available here: www.efftourism.eu.

Final meeting of EFF Tourism project

From 19 to 20 September 2017 in Cáceres, Spain, the final meeting of the EFFT project was held. All project partners met with the stakeholders of Cluster Turismo de Extremadura. The project leader presented the results of the project to all the attendees, counting among them with companies of their organization and trying to realize synergies during the two days of the event. Companies related to the EFF Tourism project attended in all areas of activity: Hotels, activity companies, active leisure companies, etc

Consideraciones finales

At the opening of the conference the members of the Final Conference and Cluster technicians proceeded to deliver the corresponding material to each of the participants. Speakers from the European partners of France, Hungary and Estonia, the people in charge of presenting the success stories on which they have worked and which are now a reality:

- Alain Outon on behalf of the European Federation of Nautical Tourism Destinations -
- Zoltan Haasz intervenes as a provider of tourist services in Lake Velencei in Hungary, proceeding with a presentation of images and videos to discover the tourist resource in which they work.
- Aivar Ruukel also intervenes on the part of Karuskose OÜ-Soma.com as a sustainable European destination.

Because the tool must be maintained over time, this debate about the possibilities of this project for each of the partners and for the field of education and training developed with respect to all the material that has been generated for the final publications. The promotion of the use and dissemination of this project will be in the hands of any partner that makes proper use of it, taking in public policy and the leaders of each country a possible future ally in the aid for the dissemination of results
